Exchange Drop May Cause Abatement of Interest On European Loans.

Will the United States be forced to issue bonds, bearing 6 per cent interest? That is the all important question at the present time and one that deserves a close study by every individual in the country, for the answer seems to rest with the individual responsibility toward America's immediate economic situation.

A reflection of this responsibility was partly brought home yesterday in the House by Republican Leader Mondell, who, in summing up the international financial situation as it affects the United States, said:

The shadow of the deplorable financial conditions of Europe is thrown across our country with ever-increasing and ominous portent of danger. Ours is the only great commercial nation that remains on a specie basis and the
